City between sea and sky.

Vancouver is a such wondrous and diverse place that getting bored is a challenge. Kayak past skyscrapers, ride a gondola through virgin forests or take a water taxi to admire First Nation artwork.

Sometime for everyone - even Lady Gaga.

At the outset of redesigning all 96 rooms at the Opus Vancouver two years ago, the design team created five characters, intended to represent the hotel's prototypical guests: Pierre, the Parisian restaurant critic, Dede, the actress from Los Angeles, Mike, the gay doctor from New York, and Billy, the rock musician from London. And last but certainly not least, Susan, the child-friendly yoga enthusiast from Toronto. To satisfy the whims of these five fictitious muses, five varied design concepts were developed based on different color scales, art objects and even music playlists.

Irrespective of type, all the rooms have iPads, espresso machines and free rental bicycles. The Opus is colorful, cool and just a bit retro. No wonder that it's also a favorite with celebrities: Lady Gaga has stayed here, despite being a square peg with respect to the schemes.
