

SAT. STUFF WE LIKE – REDFISH KIDS CLOTHING

November 7, 2015 – 1 Comment

Finding great holiday clothing for kids can be harder than you'd think. You want your kids to look adorable, but you also want them to be able to move and play when they get bored. And if they're comfortable enough to take a nap when the tryptophan kicks in – well, so be it! Yeah, right. Like THAT'S gonna happen.

Recently we've discovered Redfish Kids Clothing and we gotta say, it's pretty darn perfect for the holidays and beyond. Made in Canada and 100% sweatshop free, Redfish Kids Clothing was co-founded by Kristy Brinkley and Lorraine Kitsos. Born of a desire to create children's clothing with "heart", Redfish Kids Clothing is committed to quality materials – handpicked from around the world – to local craftsmanship and zero in-house waste. Redfish Kid's "Clothing for the Courageous" motto reflects the brand's commitment to children and serves as a celebration of their courage, creativity and unlimited potential to shape the future. Designs are versatile and durable, allowing freedom of movement for fun play.

We adore the crisp lines of this brand and love that pieces can be easily layered and worn together. Plus, Redfish Kids Clothing transforms and endures with growing kids. Designs are modern yet old and historic in pattern, silhouette, and construction. Using fabrics that are hand-selected from around the world, the strong images and expressive colours of Redfish Kids Clothing embody a careful blend of styles that traverse many cultures while adhering to a clean and classic aesthetic.

Redfish Kids Clothing celebrates and encourages individuality. Each piece is designed to allow mobility and self-expression for active developing bodies. From the stylish Good Fortune Skirt, to the edgy Sohosuki Hoodie and new Kuzi Pant, to the classic T-Shirt Swing Dress in four new bold-striped hues, Redfish offers fashion forward designs that #MAMAS and kids will love.

So watch eyes sparkle this holiday season when your kids set their gaze on the new Redfish Holiday 2015 collection. Then let them run around like maniacs, take tons of pictures, fill them up with food, and hope they finally take that nap. But if they don't, at least they'll look cute as they drive you crazy.
