Democracy, broadly speaking, is a good thing. But when it comes to food? Well, let's just say that's not its most effective application. Yes, everyone with a smartphone and a spoon is free to express their opinion, but we still believe in the value of expertise—and the people who possess it, those whose palates can't be swayed by PR or payola. Once again, those people have rendered their verdicts. Welcome to our enlightened dictatorship.
